AgwA is a Brussels architectural office founded between 2003 and 2006 by Harold Fallon and Benoît Vandebulcke and later expanded with Benoit Burquel. Their projects anticipate the evolution of buildings over time and of different users. Although AgwA often proposes out-of-the-box solutions, their projects are simple, effective and sustainable on both an ecological and economic level.

AgwA is also active in education and research. In 2018, the partners founded Architecture in Practice, an interuniversity research group for practicing architects. Since 2019 they publish the book series "In Practice".
